

April & Elise

Amy, Jenny, Matt and Dan stop everything that they are doing. Amy needs to go to CVS to buy some blister Band-Aids. Her new All Birds flats are digging into her feet. They call an Uber, but only after much discussion about current specials and promotions and setting up Dan's new account to get them discounted rides.

Their drivers name is Chazz. Chazz has stories. Chazz recites poetry. Chazz has a bad sense of direction and Chazz has rags that smell of gasoline in his front seat. He drops them off at CVS. Well close to it, because of Chazz's direction ineptitude. He takes them to the Walgreens across the street. Since Amy hates Walgreens, they walk across the street to CVS.

They split up at the overpriced Halloween candy to locate the Band-Aids. Matt and Dan are distracted and loiter by the magazine section. They check out the latest selections of Mad Libs and Sudoku. Dan wanders over to the make-up. He looks over all of the lipsticks – Maple Frost, Tea Rose, Lavendar Jam. He chooses a Magenta Love and unwraps the plastic slowly and puts it carefully on his lips. Matt comes over and says “Dude, that color is all wrong for you. You are ugly.”

After procuring the Band-Aids, the Magenta Love lipstick, and the ridiculously long CVS receipt of coupons – the double doors open and they step outside.
